Preface

This annotated bibliography is addressed to teachers, counselors,principals, administrators and other educators as well as students and parents interested in their rights and responsibilities concerning school law.

It was prepared especially for the symposium on "Law in the Classroom" sponsored by the Gregorians, the Hellenic Council of Education and the Polish American Educators Association known as HIP. The conference was held at Triton College on February 4, 1978.

The aim of the symposium and the bibliography is to inform lay and professional people of their legal rights and responsibilities according to recent laws and court decisions. It is hoped that the bibliography may serve as a practical and ready reference to information on this subject.

Entries listed were selected from several sources: including, an ERIC search, the University of Illinois, Chicago Circle Library, and suggestions from the Loyola University librarian, the De Paul University librarian, the HIP committee members, and the symposium speakers. Undoubtedly there are other good sources in this area, if they are brought to the attention of the author every effort will be made to include them in any future revisions.

The writer wishes to extend his appreciation to all who provided assistance in this work: the above librarians, the symposium committee, Vincent Romano, Jerome Long and other members of Triton College who assisted the symposium committee. Also, to Robert Johnson who tracked down many references, to Danute Brusokas who was responsible for the format of the cover page, to Gertrude Hunt for typing the manuscript and others in Student Counseling and Student Affairs Department who contributed of their time and effort

PERIODICALS

Anker, Irving
Urban bankruptcy and the schools: A view from the bottom
Phi Delta Kappan, Vol. 58, No. 4, Dec., 1976, 350-353.

Anker examines whether our American system of school financing can continue to meet the needs of the future, guaranteeing equal educational opportunity for all. Objecting to the property tax as not being calibrated to register the needs of the population, Anker establishes a compelling argument for his solution: nationalization of school finance.

Anson, R. J.
The educator's response to Goss and Wood
Phi Delta Kappan, 1975, 57, 16-19

This article is an analysis of the Goss and Wood decisions: "The Supreme Court's Goss and Wood decisions require that disciplinary action be fair and responsible.

Ball, Mary Adah
Do counselors need to know about due process
School Counselor, 21. 2. 130-135, Nov., 73

Noting that counselors are seldom able to give legal advice or information to counselors, the author discusses those parts of the federal and state constitutions that deal with due process along with court cases that define and interpret the legal rights of students in this regard.

Bangs, Arthur J.
Privilege and the counseling profession
Personnel and Guidance Journal, 50. 4. 270-275, Dec., 71.

By Common law, attorneys possess the right of privileged communication. Whether or not the counselor client relationship should also be entitled to the privilege is a matter that generates argument. This article examines the significance of the privilege, and some of the reasons both for and against its extension.

Behavior Modification: How to keep the good
Science News. 106. 10. 151. Sept., 74

Results of several behavior modification programs are described. Legal concerns have arisen regarding whether individuals must consent to treatment. Dr. Michael Learner, a Kansas City lawyer, says consent must be given.

Boyd, Robert E., and Heinsen, Richard D.
Problems in privileged communication
Personnel and Guidance Journal. 50. 4. 276-279. Dec. 71

The authors conclude that statutory protection of privilege is not a carte blanche protection; rather it affords the counselors a diminished degree of dependence upon judicial discretion.

Brooks, Lois, Coombs, Jacque
Lobby for children's rights
Elementary School Guidance and Counseling, 9, 4. 333-336. May, 1975

Examines the basic role of professional guidance organizations regarding the rights of children within the educational setting.

Buckley amendment: Focus on a professional dilemma
School Counselor, 23. 3. 162-164. Jan., 76

Discusses pupil record keeping, student and parents' rights, and how counselors should function to safeguard those individual rights. The history behind the Buckley amendment is also described.

Deblassie, Richard R.
The counselor, privileged communication, and the law
Educational Leadership. 33. 7. 522-4. Apr., 76

Examined are the legal rights of school counselors in relation to confidential communications from student clients.

Delrich, Frederick
Must counselers tell all
Education Digest. 38. 3. 48-9. Nov., 72

Discusses the legal implications when a school counselor does or does not reveal confidential records or information to a court of law

Dexter, Gene
Should counselors be granted privileged communication
Facility: The Journal of the Professional Counselors' Assn. 3. 3. 13-17. May-June, 71

Members of the legal profession are going to be cautious in recommending statutes granting privileged communication to counselors. However, in the opinion of the author, after certain inconsistencies have been cleared up concerning how and where information is distributed, counselors should make efforts to secure the protection of legal authority.

Flygare, T. J.
The Supreme Court approves corporal punishment
Phi Delta Kappan, 1977, 59, 347-348

Frentz, Anne
Utilization of federal aid programs to further interstate equilization in educational spending
Quarterly, 11, No. 3: 99-121, Autumn, 1975

Equity in educational opportunity is examined at the national level. Cost and need components of educational costs are discussed. Federal intervention is established as a prerequisite to the achievement of equity, and various formulae for overcoming interstate disparities (flat grants, fixed matching grant, state power equalizing, and federal foundation programs).

Gauerke, Warren
Some legal concerns of school counselors of adolescents
Counseling and Values. 17. 4. 248-251. Summer, 73

Guthrie, James W.
School Finance reform: Acceptable remedies for Serrano
School Review. 207-232, Feb., 1974

Explores the philosophical differences and compares the practical consequences of two possible alternatives for states to follow to bring their school finance systems into agreement with the principle of fiscal neutrality. Guthrie points out the advantages and disadvantages of the "District Power Equalizing" (DPE) and "Full State Assumption" (FSA) alternates, suggesting a better solution might be a combination of the two plans. The amalgam could contain a high expenditure floor, accompanied by a statewide uniform property tax rate. Over this amount, local districts could be given discretionary spending power, with district ability to generate the added revenue being "power equalized."

Halperin, Samuel
Federal takeover, State default, or a family problem?
Phi Delta Kappan, 57, No . 10, 679-682, June, 1976

Halperin sees federal guidelines and regulations as coming close to outweighing the impact of meager federal fiscal support. "What was once viewed as 'tainted federal money' is now considered 'taint enough' to ease the pain of increased regulation." He views the best defence against big government is to move locally, in timely and deliberate fashion.

Hazard, William R.
Courts in the saddle: School boards out
Phi Delta Kappan, 56, 4 (Dec., 1974), pp. 259-261

The article deals with all educational policy areas including student rights and discipline. The author attempts to point out the consequences of increasing judicial policy-making on the current government structure of the schools.

James, Thomas H.
Big $$ boost in federal aid debunked as myth
Compact 7, No. 2, 29-33, MaypJune, 1973

James sees the pattern of federal support for elementary and seconday education in decline, and the concept of massive federal aid in the future as a myth. His view of the future includes 4 major points: 1) financing schools is and will be state business, 2) the period of growth for schools has ended, the need of the future will be expanded school services, 3) we need to recognize that schools are stable institutions, capable of orderly change, 4) we need not be confused about deschooling society, for our society will continue to need enormous inputs of educated people.

Kaplan, Paul S.
Counselor, ethics, and the faculty
School Counselor, 21, 3, 232-235, Jan., 74

The author explores the dilemma resulting from a situation where the counselor's loyalties to the client and the institution that employs him are in conflict.

Karsh, Norman
Report on president's commission on school finance
Compact, 6, No. 2, 3-7, April, 1972

Karsh summarizes the specifics itemized in the President's commission report on school finance, noting it clearly calls for states to move, to full state funding of schools, and for the federal government to provide an incentive grant to states to assist them to move forward on full state funding. The report noted the commission's summary of its position saying..."In brief, the commission sees the federal government performing a leadership and pioneering role in long-range educational policy, but only a supplementary role to the states in financing school capital and operating costs."

Kazalunas, John R.
Conscience, the law, and practical requirements of the Buckley amendment
School Counselor, 24, 4, 243-247, Mar., 77

Discusses the Buckley amendment and its relationship to counselor's responsibilities around confidentiality. Problems arising from implementation of this law are discussed. Assitional legislation is suggested with possible alternatives for counselors. Counselors' dilemma about permitting access to confidential information is stressed.

Kiell, Norman
Student Counseling and the law
Improving College University Teaching, 18, 1, 34-36, Winter, 1970

Killian, John D.
The law, the counselor, and student records
Personnel Guidance Journal, 46, 6, 423-32, Feb., 70

Counselor's legal responsibilities in release of information about student involves matter of parental rights to information; defamation, libel, and slander; and privileged communication. Counselor has little to fear provided he performs professionally and ethically.

Koltveit, Thomas H.
Counselor-consultant as quasi-ombudsman
Personnel and Guidance Journal, 52, 3, 198-200, Nov., 73

The secondary school counselor, as quasi-ombudsman, differentiates between the role of counselor as consultant (where the counselor's primary task is to aid the individual to develop strength to resolve personal difficulties himself) and role of counselor as ombudsman (where the counselor can go over the head of a recalcitrant teacher to correct the situation). Ways in which counselors can function as quasi-ombudsmen without alienating their colleagues are suggested.

Ladd, Edwart T.
Regulating student behavior without ending up in court
Phi Delta Kappan, 54, 5, pp. 304-309, Jan., 1973

The author compares feelings of the student rights advocates and school authority advocates. He states that because of increasing demands for student rights, the schools should develop workable, written statements of students' rights and responsibilities. All these efforts to meet the demands should be shared by everyone concerned with education, not just by administrators alone.

Lessinger, Leon M.
The child's right to competence, confidence, and caring
Elementary School Guidance and Counseling, 9, 4, 319-320, May 75

Briefly describes the student's right to be surrounded by teachers who care about him.

Lindenberg, Steven P.
Attention students: Be advised
Personnel and Guidance Journal, 55, 1, 34-36, Sept., 76

A survey of the short history of the issue of counselor certification and licensure are the springboard for imagined future outcomes. Questions to ponder concern how licensure will come about, who will regulate the profession, and what part counselors must take to avoid the dilemma of lawsuits and malpractice.

Litwack, Lawrence, and others
Testimonial privileged communication and the school counselor
School Counselor, 17, 2, 108-111, Nov., 69

Briefly reviews literature and state laws regarding counselor legal status and client confidentiality. Expresses need for professional associations to assume leadership role in push for uniform legislation.

Loesch, Larry C.

This article discusses the school counselor's task in being responsive to student rights in educational and psychological assessment.

Martinez, Susanne
Sexism in public education: Litigation issues
Inequality in Education, 18, 5-11, Oct., 74

Young women throughout the country have been excluded from elite academic high schools, denied access to "masculine" vocational education programs, and confronted daily with school textbooks which portray them as placid, unimaginative, and unproductive citizens. Discusses legal cases involving sex discrimination under the topics of overt sex discrimination, vocational education, athletics, scholarships, covert sex discrimination, vocational testing and counseling, textbooks, and economic expenditures.

Menacker, J.
Student civil rights: What the counselor should know
Personnel and Guidance Journal, 56, 153-157, 1977

The author recommends that counselors provide objective assistance to students to combat negative elements and capitalize on positive elements in their environment and help them become knowledgeable about their civil rights.

Robbins, Norman M.
There ought to be a law to condone or condemn condonation
Family Coordinator, 20, 1, 74-76, Jan., 71

There are four prominent common law defenses to a divorce suit. They are condonation, recrimination, collusion, and connivance. The defense of condonation should be abolished because it obstructs reconciliation.

Schubert, Leo
Editorial--malpractice: II
Journal of College Science Teaching, 5, 2, 81, Nov., 75

Indicates that malpractice suits are a new feature in education and explains how teachers, universities, and colleges can protect themselves against this threat.

Scott, Maurice M.
Property tax assessments and school funding
Illinois School Board Journal, Vol. 43, No. 6, November-December, 1975

Scott notes that equalization of property assessments among counties in Illinois is vital to provide a uniform basis for state aid to schools as well as to ensure that taxpayers in all areas of Illinois pay property taxes on a uniform basis. He lists the wide discrepancies among counties in their assessment practices, explains the problems created by erratic assessments, what's being done to modernize the system, and what it means for school districts.

Shaln, Donna E., and Williams, Mary Frase
State tax politics, the voters, and school finance reform
Phi Delta Kappan, 56, No. 1, 10-14, Sep., 1974

The authors maintain that school finance reform requiring statewide voter approval will have little chance of success until an explanation is provided for the gross inconsistency between citizen opinion (as sampled by polls) concerning reduction in the property tax and behavior in the voting booth. Two major explanations are provided for the failure of seven amendments concerning property tax reform: the content of the proposals and the constitutional amendment process itself.

Steenland, Roger
Options in suicidal crisis
NASPA Journal, 10, 4, 328-332, Apr., 73

This article briefly outlines possible causes for the prevalence of suicide attempts among college students and then discusses various options for handling such crises: whether to notify the student's closest relatives, whether to obtain medical evaluation and treatment (as opposed to psychological counseling), and whether to allow the student to remain in school.

Student rights: A developing right to know
School Counselor, 23, 4, 281-288, Mar., 76

The American School Counselors Association presents position statements concerning a number of issues such as: student rights, principles and guidelines of confidentiality, drug education and counseling, guidance service programs and financial problems of counseling services.

Student Rights and the Courts
Commission on administrative behaviors supportive of human rights "A sample student code"
Phi Delta Kappan, 4, pp. 236-342. See also p. 235. Dec., 1974

Phi Delta Kappa's sample code is intended to assert student rights rather than restrict them. It states those rights in positive terms, leaving the "shall nots" to the school administration.

The code covers every major area of student rights that the courts have focused on, especially in recent years.

Torres, Anthony
School finance and the law
Illinois Schools Journal, 56, No. 2, 3-7. Summer, 1976

In order to help the school administrator better understand the current directions in school finance, Torres provides a history and analysis of three court cases dealing with school finance.

Van Hoose, William H.
Children's rights and the school counselor
Elementary School Guidance and Counseling, 9, 4, 279-286, May, 75
The author presents the case for the rights of children. He also demonstrates how schools can guarantee more democratic treatment for children by recognizing children's rights and gives his views on the counselor's role as child advocate.

Wamble, Hugh
Supreme Court acts on sectarian aid
Today's Education, 64, 4, 63-66, Nov. - Dec., 1975

Reviews the criteria used in Meek vs. Pittinger (1975) in the U.S. Supreme Court's declaration that Pennsylvania's plan for non public school aid was unconstitutional. The Court said, however, that its three criteria -- secular legislative purpose, primary effect that neither enhances nor inhibits religion, and avoidance of excessive government entangelement with religion--are only guidelines, not limits.

Ware, Martha L.
The law and counselor ethics
Personnel and Guidance Journal, 50, 4, 305-310, Dec., 71

Counselors cannot look only to the law to solve their professional problems in dealing with information about students. Nevertheless, they must understand confidentiality, privilege, and privacy in the context of ethical standards and legal requirements if they are to meet their responsibilities to clients, the profession, and to themselves.

Wynkoop, Robert J.
Trends in school finance reform
Phi Kelta Kappan, 56, No. 8, 542-546, Apr., 1975

Wynkoop isolates and analyzes 6 criteria that have been clarified by recent court decisions in school finance cases, with reform guidelines that have emerged from state action. The three most heavily emphasized criteria receiving support from different courts were: 1) fiscal neutrality, 2) the state must equalize any local revenue utilized in the model, 3) variations in expenditure per pupil are permissable.

Wynkoop, Robert J.
Prognosis for change in state finance plans: An analysis of recent commission reports and court decisions
Educational Administration Quarterly, 10, No. 3, 20-32, Autumn, 1974

Wynkoop contrasts the recommendations of the most significant commission reports with the traditional school finance models and a composite of the court criteria for a constitutional school finance model.
